Cleveland Men Against Wilson.

The vote of the few still disaffected Bull Moose will be more than effect by the old Cleveland Democrats, many of whom are against Wilson. Then the Democratic state and city leaders are taking little interest in the campaign. busy fighting the City Hall clique that neither is paying much attention to the Presidential or Senatorial race.

Many of these local Democratic leaders are devoting their time and political influence to endeavoring to prevent the city from going "dry." The liquor campaign is of more vital interest to these politicians than the election of a President. The loss of the saleon support, and especially the big campaign fund contributed by the liquor dealers and saloonkeepers to the Democratic machine at every state and city election, would be a sledgenammer blow to it. The liquor fight is not in any way mixed up in the Presidential or Senatorial campaign, however, as, had there mixed up in the Fresidential of Sena-torial campaign, however, as, had there been no such contest on hand, most of these Democratic politicians would have been just as apathetic toward Wil-

"What will be the attitude in this respect of the nations who covet the wealth and opportunity of the new world when the great war is over if we are return the Wilson Administration to power? Will they have a conviction that courage and resolution stand behind the assertion of our rights? Will they believe in the sincerity of our declarations, in the certainty that the great powers of this people will be used to maintain their rights, and that our government has the wisdom and skill to use those powers effectively? There can be but one answer to this question. The Wilson Administration has had the opportunity to exhibit its character to the world and it has failed to carry conviction or to command respect. In three fields of major importance affecting international affairs—the three great subjects with which it has had to deal—it has shown itself to be irresolute and incompetent, and that is the judgment of the world. These three are the murder of our citizens on the Lusitania, the preparation of military and naval force for national defence and the ghastly failure in Mexico."

Mr. Root then took up the Administration's failure to measure up to the first duty of a government—that of protecting the lives of its citizens. After recounting the successive murders of American citizens by German submarines Mr. Root showed how the German government had taken stock of Mr. Wilson and his "strict accountability" warning.

Chauncey M. Depew replied directly to President Wilson's last Shadow Lawn speech, saying in part:

"President Wilson in his speech last Saturday at Shadow Lawn challenged the record of the Republican party the record of the Republican party hile in power, and gave unstinted praise to the Democratic party. Like everything the President does, his speech was admirably phrased and adroitly and captivatingly put, but generalizations never will bear the acid test of facts.

"The record shows that, while the Republican party has been a party of obstruction when in power, the Democratic party lacks both.
